ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A semiconductor laser array apparatus including: a substrate; a plurality of current blocking elements that are stripe shaped and are formed on the substrate; and a plurality of light waveguides that are formed between the plurality of current blocking elements, where at least two adjacent light waveguides are optically connected by removing a part of each current blocking element therebetween.